

6/6/14

To the Editor:

Well the story in the "Faith" section (Sentinel- 6/6/14) says it all. "Faith leaders call for gay marriage". The so called experts come out of the woodwork. First, using the title "Reverend" shows how Biblically challenged these supposed authorities are. Haven't they read Psalm 111:9, the only passage that even uses the term "reverend" (KJV) as referencing God's name? The audacity!

Then they display their audacious lack of real understanding when claiming to not "take the Bible literally" and that it is only to be referenced as "a source of ethics and stories". So now it's on the same level as Grim brothers children's novels? Why would anything in it then be referenced for teachings on morals and ethics? It's how they are able to claim such "inspired" self-serving acclamations. Selective faith?

And nowhere in the O.T. does it say even a "little, tiny bit...about gay marriage". When are these folks going to do some real in-depth research and realize the O.T. is "for our learning" (Rom 15:4)? But, once again, if the N.T. reiterates certain commands found in the Old (stoning not being one of them), it has to be that it was intended for all people for all time. But, obviously, there are those who don't want to be warned or told what to do out of rebellion against authority. It's the 60s mentality all over.

These denominations coming out of the closet in favor of what their own bibles teach, and not according to the real word of God, are only furthering what Jesus said about "many, I say unto you, will seek to enter in, and shall not be able" (Lk 13:24).

Charli Yana

www.truthdiscovered.net